IOSH Managing Sustainably

Beyond compliance, understanding a socially sustainable world of work

Why managing sustainably matters

- While many businesses have an understanding that people are an essential part of their success, few actively nurture their human capital in an informed and systematic way.
- The COVID-19 pandemic has been a wake-up call. It's now clear that occupational safety and health (OSH) is not just a nice-to-have, but a key element of business management.
- By ensuring that their workers are not only safe and healthy but also contented and fulfilled, organisations can gain a reputation for being good employers, attracting talent and loyalty.
- This course aims to raise awareness of the value of human capital and show how OSH management can contribute to a positive workforce culture and a sustainable business.

Who is the course for?

- This course is designed for managers and supervisors who want to know how to gain competitive advantage from long-term business sustainability by putting their people at the centre of their thinking.
- The course demonstrates the value of human capital. It shows how OSH links to the broader sustainability agenda and identifies how this can help to build and maintain a more sustainable business.

How does your business benefit when your employees attend this course?

- Immediate payback: your managers and supervisors will return from the training motivated and inspired, ready to introduce social sustainability principles to your organisation.

- Longer-term gain: your managers and supervisors will be able to use what they have learned to implement social sustainability measures and monitor their performance.
- You will benefit organisationally from the insights your employees gain through memorable and thought-provoking discussions and activities.

What will your employees experience when they attend the course?

They will receive globally recognised, respected and certificated training that's designed and quality-controlled by IOSH, the Chartered body for safety and health professionals.

They will learn efficiently and effectively – this single course gives solid grounding in human capital and the relationship between OSH management and social sustainability.
